

Abstract of the discipline
"International Relations and World Politics"
1 year 2 semester
Level of higher education - bachelor
Specialty 293 International Law
Number of credits - 4
Total hours - 120

The program of the academic discipline "International Relations and World Politics" is compiled in accordance with the educational and professional program of bachelor's training, field of knowledge 29 "International Relations", specialty 293 International Law.

The purpose of teaching the academic discipline is to study current scientific and practical problems of forming the mechanism of international governance and tools (technologies) for its implementation, understanding the structure of international relations and the main patterns of interaction between subjects of world politics, determining the place and role of international structures in the process of globalization, awareness of the dialectical relationship between all social, political-legal, financial-economic and military institutions of all political formations of the world.

Description of the discipline: Global governance as a phenomenon of reality. Geopolitics as a concept of international relations. International law as a legal instrument of supranational governance: general characteristics. History of the emergence and development of international law. International relations and international law in the history of political and legal thought. Political and legal orders of the world in the history of mankind: general characteristics. Phenomena of empires, colonialism and neocolonialism. The state as a subject of international law. The problem of state sovereignty in the history of international relations. Capitalism as a unique socio-economic system: general characteristics. Subjects of global governance: history of their formation and general characteristics. Financial and economic basis of modern geopolitics. Corporatocracy as a subject of global governance. The phenomenon of the corporate state. Geopolitics as a theory of international relations. Modern technologies of global governance "War of civilizations" as a paradigm of international relations in the 21st century. The phenomenon of the "new world order" - concepts of the image of the future world.

Final control form: test